Well written and illustrated. Keeps the reader (especially children) hooked in and wanting to read more.

beautiful drawings

The Shapes of Eid, According To Me is a fast read of 28 pages. It will help teach children several shapes like crescent, stars, domes, and many more shapes to them. There are tidbits of Chicago's landmarks in this book I recognized in the illustrations because we just had a family trip there. It's safe to say that I recognized the cloud gate around Magrib time or sunset and a lake I believed was the Michigan Lake by night. Now, perhaps I should reviewed this free copy I received during Ramadhan because The Shapes of Eid, According To Me pertains more to Eid-ul-Fitr but it didn't happen. That said, the shapes of Eid stays the same for the big Eid too. So, you can still acquire this goodie for your children for Eid-al-Adha. Finally, The Shapes of Eid, According To Me is a rhymmer that will help children with math concepts besides the reading component.

This book is great for reading to your child as he or she sits on your lap. You can both look at it and explain the illustrations to your child. As a teacher, it is harder to read aloud to the class of young children and explain the modern almost abstract-like illustrations to them. The shapes are not always big and clear for children to see from a distance. Having said that, if you're a parent then grab this book and read it to your child to learn about Eid and shapes.

It's so nice to be able to have stories that we can share during our Islamic holiday seasons! Such a beautifully written book about Eid! A great read on the excitement of such a momentous time!

I was very impressed by the way this book "The Shapes of Eid, According to me" is illustrated. The words with pictures are just right for young readers. Modern setting in the book is great way to connect the reader. I would love to read this book to my 6 year old princess at bedtime. Good luck Samia.

My children are at an age where they can truly appreciate and understand Ramadan and Eid. So we really appreciated this book because it was so relatable. We really enjoyed this book!

This is such a beautiful book, its fun to read the rhyming text and the illustrations are lovely, which I noticed engages the young reader immediately. I highly encourage moms/ dads to not only read it to your kids but to share it with your non Muslim neighbors, read it in your child's classroom, for the purpose of dawah and creating understanding.
