Synopsis

Instructed in the autumn of 1912 to join the Bulgarian army, then mobilising for war against Turkey, as war correspondent for the London Morning Post, I made my preparations with the thought uppermost that I was going to a cut-throat country where massacre was the national sport and human life was regarded with no sentimental degree of respect. The Bulgarians, a generation ago, had been paraded before the eyes of the British people by the fiery eloquence of Mr. Gladstone as a deeply suffering people, wretched victims of Turkish atrocities.

Customer Reviews

This book is a first-person account and very difficult to get interested in. I read as much as I could tolerate and then abandoned my effort

If you select the 'look inside!' option provided by , you will see a very professional book with a variety of illustrations. HOWEVER, what you actually receive when you purchase this book is an 'affordable paperback' which is, in fact, a bound printout with no illustrations. Or rather, wherever illustrations go, you will find [ILLUSTRATION]. It's pretty dodgy, frankly, and in many countries that sort of bait-and-switch is considered fraudulent. For my own part, I do intend to use the book - I bought it for the information contained within - but I'm certainly not impressed with it right about now. If you want the product pictured above, I suggest you copy down the publication details and look elsewhere - Abebooks or Powell's will certainly be my port of call for future book purchases.
