Street Style Page-A-Day Gallery Calendar 2017

Synopsis

Introducing a new calendar for fashion lovers, for people-watchers, for anyone who appreciates head-turning style. Street photography is not about the trends and models of glossy magazines; it's about showcasing regular people who have a bold, singular way with clothing and accessories. It's also a social media phenomenon: Photographers like The Sartorialist, Tommy Ton, and Adam Katz Sinding boast hundreds of thousands of followers. With a year of delightfully spontaneous, full-color images, Street Style celebrates the beauty and spirit of unconventional style—and the people who flaunt it—from the sidewalks of Paris to Melbourne to Tokyo to Lima.

I really like this brand and style of calendars. The images are large and clear on good paper. I have gotten the "Cats," "Birds," and "New Yorker Covers" ones in the past. The New Yorker covers were a great talking point on my classroom desk last year so I wanted to find something this year that would engage my students and be fun for me (since there wasn't another New Yorker covers calendar). I chose "Street Style" because my students like fashion, and I have a diverse school, and I thought that there would be a mix of street styles in the calendar. There are very very few people of color in this calendar (for six months there were about 22), and about half the photos are about STREET style - the other half are of stylish people standing or walking in the street. If it looks like Ralph Lauren dressed you, or you shop at Chicos - you shouldn't be featured in this calendar even if you look adorable. I do like that there are old pictures and recent ones, but there isn't enough of that. Overall, particularly because of the extreme lack of diversity (if you even see people of color, they are usually wearing fashion magazine type outfits - there is no "street," as in hip hop, or Latino style), this calendar is a bust.

I get them every year. Easy to read and pretty.

Item was delivered at time and looks as advertised.

Why did I only get till July 3rd 2017???????

I love these calendars but this particular theme is awful. Really a disappointment.

Fun fashion calendar... lots of ideas for mixing up your wardrobe!

Fantastic!
