Elizabeth lives in Michigan with her husband, Richard.

Great

Perfect for my 5th Grade Social Studies standards, along with 2nd Person Point of View Reading standards. The students loved reading this type of writing while learning about history!

I liked the fact that you could choose what you wanted to do, even if you ended up dying. I would recommend this for kids ages 6+. I also liked it had real facts, as if a normal book, but choosing your path.

My 4th graders adored this. Bought a few copies and it was constantly being borrowed to read independently while we were in this topic during SS. They particularly enjoyed the "Choose your own Adventure" idea in a book!

We have just completed the Revolutionary War and this served as an interesting review since the children could pick where they wanted to be and what they would be doing throughout the story. The interaction kept their attention. I didn't want to spoil it by telling them they were learning something.

I ordered several of these books for my son for Christmas. He's 11 and it's hard to get him to read. He had a WWII choose your story book and loved it.

good read

My third grade twins (boy and girl) love taking these books out of their school library and wanted their own copies. Very engaging and educational.
