The Earth From The Air Postcard Book

Synopsis

The aerial photographs in this collection, often taken from a low altitude, show landscapes, dwellings, coasts, forests, and animals. They reveal the imprint of human civilization on the face of the globe, recording the impact of population and the world industrial economy.

"'Amazing' - The Sunday Times 'A picture book on an altogether higher plane' - The Sunday Telegraph 'Little short of sensational' - Amateur Photographer 'A phantasmagoric revelation of the shifting patterns of colour, form and human activity that adorn which planet' - The Independent Stunning' - The Irish Times 'The most comprehensive view book of aerial photography ever published' - Scotland on Sunday"

Yann Arthus-Bertrand is an internationally acclaimed photographer who has published over thirty books, including Earth from the Air and Greece from the Air.

I bought these postcards to send to a young man in the Marines. They are beautiful and interesting!

I was wandering along my way to the Natural History museum and I found that outside there was a photo exhibit. Massive prints from this book were displayed, and the work is excellent. After seeing it I was compelled to buy the book. The photos are beautiful and it is certainly worth it.
